make waves for WaterFest 2003

The South Florida Water Management District invites you to mark your calendar for March 8 and make waves for WaterFest 2003, a family fun day of water education at South County Regional Park and Coconut Cove Waterpark & Recreation Center in Boca Raton.

The free, day-long event for children and families will feature:

- Environmental educational displays
- Water conservation workshops
- Sponsor exhibit booths
- Food and refreshments
- Live entertainment
- Water games, contests and more!

And get ready to get wet! While learning how to save water and protect the environment at WaterFest 2003, you can take a dip in the park's plunge pool, relax on a tube while floating down a "river," whirl through one of the waterslides or enjoy the popular interactive children's water playground – all supervised by certified lifeguards.

But don't fret if you don't want to get wet—there's plenty to do on dry land. You can enjoy WaterFest 2003 activities among the park's Nature Area and Nature Center, picnic pavilions, sports fields/courts and tot-lots.

In addition to the family fun, businesses are also invited to participate in WaterFest 2003. The event provides an excellent opportunity to make a splash and reach thousands of children and adults from throughout the region. Sponsorship opportunities are available at various levels.
